Note

As from 28th October 2008 the portfolio's foreign investment exposure might exceed the restrictive limit of 20%, or as amended from time to time, as a result of the inward listed British American Tobacco ("BAT") shares received as part of a corporate de-merger. The South African Reserve Bank has allowed some institutional investors a grace period of 2 years to rebalance their portfolios to adhere to the foreign investment limit. The grace period for BAT expires on 27 October 2010. Records of foreign investment exposure for BAT are available upon request.

Portfolio commentary for the fourth quarter 2009

Investec was significantly below the benchmark for the quarter, with the underperformance stemming mainly from the equity component.

At an asset-allocation level, the net effect was neutral as the underweight to equities was offset by the overweight to bonds. The manager aggressively reduced its equity exposure during October and November by selling shares into the recent market rally and up-weighting its bond position. Shares were reduced across the board but Investec continues to prefer its more defensive shares in this environment. Most of the pain in the performance came in December when the markets rallied and the fund was underweight equity. The manager is comfortable with its overweight to bonds, believing they will offer better returns than cash in 2010.

Investec's performance was predominantly the result of poor share selection within the equity component, with the large underweight to Basic Materials detracting value. The manager retains the view that once the leading indicators turn down, Resources tend to underperform. Poor choices within Basic Materials detracted significant value, specifically an overweight to ArcelorMittal, Gold Fields and Exxaro. Resources were supported by strong foreign interest. This led to anomalous behaviour by this sector because foreign interest was a significant factor in strengthening the rand and also Resources. A strong rand usually results in a weaker performance by the sector. Foreign interest in Resources was a result of the recovery in the global economy led by emerging markets. Stronger emerging market growth implies higher commodity prices and SA's attractiveness is consequently its Resource sector. Poor share selection within Industrials, specifically Construction & Materials, also dragged significantly on performance. Being overweight Wilson Bayley, Basil Read and Group Five detracted value, although Investec significantly reduced the overweight to this sector over the past two quarters. Construction struggled as post-World Cup fears escalated. The sluggishness of the SA recovery has led to a widespread concern that the boost to the sector given by World Cup preparations may not have traction beyond the event.

Investment strategy

This portfolio invests into Investec Asset Management's local best view strategy. Investec is primarily a top-down house, allowing its macro-economic view of the world to drive its asset allocation and sector selection. This is coupled with a bottom-up share selection process to choose the underlying shares in the portfolio. The asset manager has historically had a greater Growth orientation in its portfolio than most other South African managers. Simply defined, it prefers to hold shares in companies that are going to grow earnings at a rate superior to the market. Investec is the third-largest asset manager in South Africa in terms of assets under management.
